

Digital Health Week 2024

4-10 November

What is Digital Health Week?

Digital Health Week is a global week of action that brings together politicians, civil society, academia, professional bodies, the private sector and citizens to explore the opportunities and challenges of digital health. This week-long initiative aims to highlight the critical role of digital health in achieving Universal Health Coverage and produce learnings that can steer future discussion on this issue.

Previous Digital Health Weeks have hosted over 250 events and seen more than 100 organisations and 17,000 attendees take action, including representatives from the governments of India, Ethiopia, Kenya and Tanzania, among others.

Now in its fourth year, Digital Health Week is an open space where participants can share expertise, learn from others, promote best practices, amplify ideas and activities, mobilise support behind projects and campaigns and collectively bring the issue to governments. The week runs from 4-10 November 2024.

How can your organisation take part?

There are many ways that you or your organisation can take action during Digital Health Week. This could be hosting a panel discussion, a workshop, a hackathon, a webinar to consult stakeholders around a new initiative, driving conversation on social media, launching a new report or a campaign. To participate, simply sign up via the registration form.

We would also encourage you and your colleagues to join the events and activities planned, and to promote these through your networks. You can do this by browsing the event calendar and exploring the activities on the Digital Health Week website.

What will you need to do?

1. Register - if you are interested in hosting an event or running an activity then let us know via the sign up form. You will be responsible for arranging the event and the Digital Health Week team will help with promotion.
2. Find out more - we've set out additional information on Digital Health Week to help with your planning, you can find this in our participation pack here.
3. Join in - join other events and activities, browse our calendar here and explore the activities planned here.

For any questions please contact ben.grierson-hill@transformhealthcoalition.org.